Indexes

Features

- Colored, reinforced mylar tabs for easy identification
- Bind edge reinforced holes for added durability
- Create tab titles for any application
- Custom paper stock available, call for details

Highlights

Custom indexes are often needed to organize documents that reside within a file folder or divide sections within a binder. Indexes allow documents and subject matter to be located and referenced instantaneously allowing retrieval of information to be hassle-free. Reinforced index tabs are available in 16 standard tab colors, with special neon colors also available (call for details). Custom indexes are available in a variety of different tab lengths and widths and can have printing applied to both the front and back of the tab. Body copy is also available (some limitations apply, call for details).

Proven Index Solutions

Multi-Functional Solutions Organize Contents of Patient Records

Use one or all three styles of chart dividers to maximize document organization. Proven to provide a uniform and consistent method to categorize information, each style provides unique benefits.

INDEXES

The most common, economical style provides for multiple categories without excessive bulking in file.

FILEBACKS

Hinged/piggy-back style allows greater flexibility because each category can be utilized individually.

SELF-ADHESIVE

DOUBLE DUTY FILEBACKS

Provide the same number of categories with just one half the amount of dividers because the tabs have a different title printed on each side. If ordered with a fastener installed on the front only, they can provide sections for quick, drop-in filing.

Combine the benefits of all three to create the patient chart that works best for you. Turn to the next page for custom options!

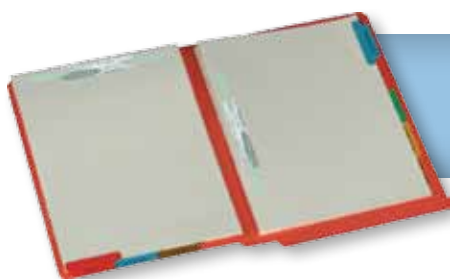

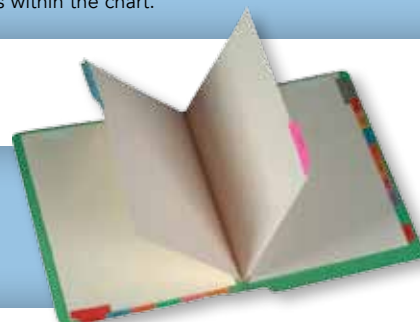

Combine Indexes and Filebacks Based on Document Activity

Indexes can be used to divide and categorize documents which have minimal activity or do not require active additions to each section. Filebacks used in conjunction with indexes allow more active use of sections within the chart.

Bottom and Side Tab Indexes Used With Self-Adhesive Filebacks

Maximize and divide without excessive bulk. These three styles of dividers used in conjunction with each other can provide over 20 sections in a standard folder with 3/4" expansion. Center section without fasteners allows for convenient drop-in filing.

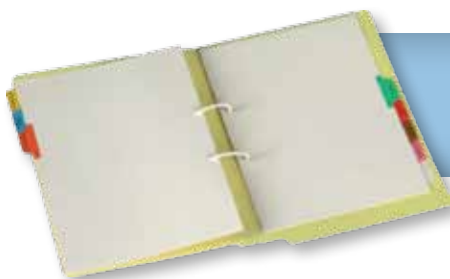

Two Styles of Filebacks Eliminate Folder Distortion

Using both flip-up style and book style filebacks provides for equalization of contents within the record. Also eliminates excessive bulking at one end of folder which allows easier filing and retrieval.

Dividers and Pockets Make a Perfect Chart

Small documents, papers you can't punch, active patient visits and archived information all in one chart...that's creative and efficient. For Pressure Sensitive Pockets see page 38.

A Great Solution for Very Active Records

DocuClip fasteners (page 35) used in conjunction with standard book style/side tab indexes provide maximum access and flexibility to all patient information. Proven to be a real workhorse.

Labels

Color Code Filing

Applying labels to the file folder tab to color code your filing systems adds a number of benefits and efficiencies to your filing system. Two of the more prominent benefits are referencing and locating file folders within the system and, perhaps the most cost saving benefit, is locating misfiles within a filing system. Using color coding in your filing system can speed up referencing and spotting costly misfiles by as much as 70 percent.

The four most commonly-used methods of color coding are as follows:

Alphabetical - The use of alpha labels to designate a file by patient, client or customer name. By using the first few characters of a name, there is little to no need for a cross reference system to access active files. The amount of alpha letters needed to color code a single file is determined by the size of the overall filing system, frequency of common names, etc.

Straight Numeric - The use of numeric labels to designate a file by customer number, date, social security number, etc... Use of numeric labels usually requires some level of cross reference and is very simple in nature. The most recent file (new customer, patient, etc.) is usually found at the end of a straight numeric filing system.

Alpha/Numeric - The use of a combination of alpha and numeric labels to create a filing system. The use of both alpha and numeric labels are used to create a specific file for customer files, court files, service records, property management files, etc.

Terminal Digit - The use of numeric labels for large volume filing systems. This unique systems breaks large filing systems up in groups of 100 or 1000 files, depending on the overall size of the filing system. This type of system places the initial emphasis on the ending digits of the file number to speed referencing, thus the name "Terminal Digit". You are basically creating smaller systems, or groups, within the entire filing system.

Other labels such as Year, Month, Solid (designator) labels can be used to further departmentalize or detail the information located on the tabs of files within your filing system.
